

Library thoughts from the Professor Vol. 1 Chap. 7

This month I am going out on a limb of sorts. I am going to write my review on something I have not seen. That's right; I am going to recommend to you that you view this material without my having seen it. Further I am going to tell you that what you will view is excellent material.

Now to be fair about this what I said is not totally accurate. You see I have seen some but not all of this material. Mainly because it is a lot of material to view and it is not completed.

My review this month is about a fishing show called The New Fly Fisher and for those of you who are uninformed it is a show that can be found on NESN and some of the PBS networks. I started watching it several years ago and became a quick fan of the show. The show is as its name indicates a Fly Fishing show that to a degree focuses on the New Fly Fisher. But the show is not just for the novice. What I find most enjoyable about the show is that it is not a trout fishing show or a salmon fishing show but a fly fishing show that concentrates on catching fish; All kinds of different fish. If you want to see people catching trout, salmon, bass, pike, panfish and just about every other type of fish then you will love this show.

This show is not just watching people catch fish it is about learning how to catch fish and what to use to do it. They try to spend a little time with you in each show to identify what you will need to catch each species. They will spend a little time on the rod and reel and line, then some time on the type of flies you need. From there they will spend time on how to fish the water. The series targets all fish and all types of water whether it be a small stream, large river, large lake, the ocean or a small pond. It is a show that whether novice or expert you come away feeling that you have gotten something useful out of the show.

So what does this show have to do with a review of the stuff in our library? Well that's the best part for the members of the club. Our Board had the wisdom to purchase the first 5 seasons of The New Fly Fisher and it is available to all the club members to watch at their leisure and to learn from and enjoy what I think is an excellent show.

So take some time prop your feet up on the footstool and take home a ½ hour of pure fishing enjoyment

PS. They now have a magazine called The New Fly Fisher as well.
